

Dilation is an essential portion of an eye examination. It allows the doctor to properly evaluate the internal health of your eyes. The true health of your eyes cannot be established without this procedure. The effects of dilation are minimal and typically involve light sensitivity and some blur at near for about four to six hours. You will normally be able to drive after dilation. Insurance typically covers this procedure.

Non-insurance patients will have an additional $10.00 fee.

If you answer NO, would you like to reschedule the dilation at a time more convenient for you?

I realize that by refusing dilation my doctor cannot assess the internal health of my eyes.
